Universal Data Repository

The Universal Data Repository (UDR) serves as the single source for receipt and distribution of medical catalog data. The UDR contains catalog data elements from a variety of government and commercial sources.

BACKGROUND

The Universal Data Repository (UDR) was developed and produced for the Defense Medical Logistics Standard Support (DMLSS) program by the Defense Logistics Information Service (DLIS) in Battle Creek, Michigan. Data validation and data integrity remain the responsibility of the designated owner of the data submitting the catalog information to the UDR.

Each month the UDR CD-ROM provides catalog data to field units, ships, and stand-alone users. In addition, the UDR Delta Process provides catalog and pricing updates to DMLSS server sites.
